

ASEAN Level 1 Distribution Box Product Certification

Article Overview

ASEAN Level 1 Distribution Box products require compliance with national safety and technical standards in each member state, with certification typically involving testing, documentation, and local registration.

Overview of ASEAN Certification Framework

ASEAN does not have a single unified certification system like the EU's CE marking. Each member state maintains its own national certification body, testing requirements, and compliance documentation. The ASEAN Consultative Committee for Standards and Quality (ACCSQ) works to harmonize standards and reduce technical barriers to trade, but progress varies by product category, including electrical and electronics products. Level 1 Distribution Boxes, as electrical distribution equipment, generally fall under electrical safety and EMC (Electromagnetic Compatibility) regulations.

Key Certification Requirements

Safety and EMC Testing: Products must comply with IEC/ISO standards adopted by the respective ASEAN country. Testing is usually conducted in accredited laboratories, and some countries may accept reports from recognized foreign labs with bridging declarations.
