

Cable laying reel for fiber optic cable

Article Overview

Fiber optic cable laying reels are specialized systems designed to ensure safe, controlled, and efficient deployment of fiber cables in various environments, from in-building installations to offshore projects.

Types of Fiber Optic Cable Reels

1. Portable Field Reels Lightweight aluminum reels are ideal for temporary or tactical deployments. They typically accommodate 100, 250, or 500 meters of fiber cable, feature double flanges for easy access, and include brakes and foldable winding handles for controlled unwinding. These reels are stackable and often have storage space for connectors, making them suitable for mobile, industrial, or harsh environments such as military or broadcast applications (Foss).
2. Mini Cable Reels for Blow-In Applications Compact and portable mini reels are designed for fiber blowing systems, allowing a single operator to set up and deploy cables efficiently. They feature ball-bearing drum shafts for smooth rotation, adjustable drum heights, and lever locks to secure the cable during installation. These reels are particularly useful for in-building, FTTH, or confined-space installations where precise control is required (AIRJET).
3. Modular Advanced Reel Systems (MARS®) MARS reels are lightweight, modular polymer systems designed for rapid deployment and storage in harsh environments. They support multiple deployment options, including A-frames, backpacks, tripods, and transit cases. Features include flip-out handles, built-in dividers, connector cradles, and stackable designs. MARS reels are ideal for applications requiring quick setup, repeated deployment, and flexibility in cable handling (OCC).
4. Offshore and Industrial Cable Lay Reels For large-scale or subsea fiber optic installations, specialized cable lay spreads and reels are used. These syst...
