

Is selling telecommunications fiber optic cables a good business opportunity

Article Overview

Selling fiber optic cables is a promising business opportunity due to strong global demand, rapid 5G and broadband expansion, and growing data center infrastructure.

Market Growth and Demand

The global fiber optic cable market is experiencing robust growth, projected to increase from USD 15.7 billion in 2026 to USD 35.6 billion by 2035, with a CAGR of 7-9.5% depending on the source . This growth is driven by the expansion of 5G networks, fiber-to-the-home (FTTH) deployments, hyperscale data centers, and industrial automation . Over 68% of newly deployed fixed broadband networks in major economies use fiber-based infrastructure, and more than 90% of 5G backhaul projects rely on optical fiber .

Key Market Drivers

- Telecommunications expansion: Increasing broadband subscriptions and high-speed internet demand globally .
- Data center growth: The U.S. alone hosts over 5,400 data centers, creating high demand for high-density fiber systems .
- Government initiatives: Programs like India's BharatNet and U.S. federal broadband initiatives are expanding fiber networks in underserved areas .
- Technological adoption: Ribbon fibers, micro-cables, and high-density architectures are increasingly used to support AI-driven traffic and smart infrastructure
